

I oppose RM-11392 as being premature rule making.

I do not feel that “isolating” an individual digital mode in its’ own corner of the RF spectrum to be conducive to the continued development of newer modes of operation.

New methods or procedures may be developed to protect existing modes from interference or improve effectiveness may come about in this learning process. I feel that at this time it is too early to tell or to place restrictions on the development.